THINK AMERICAN IDOL... BUT FOR SCIENTISTS!

Think Goodall, Sagan, and American Idol for the next generation of scientists. Ten regional finalists face expert judges, each spinning three minutes into a magical evening of science storytelling.

And while the judges deliberate, NOAA Fisheries's Lead Scientist for the Hawaiian Monk Seal Research Program, Charles Littnan, will explain how National Geographic's Crittercam technology reveals a closer look on the seal's daily lives and how this helps to protect them.

Come cheer on these brave souls and journey with them to the cutting edge of exploring Earth and beyond!

GOT FAME?

Started in the UK in 2005, FameLab is a panel-judged science communication competition and skills-building event for early career scientists.
